Institute of Criminology Public Seminar Series

Thursday 22nd May 2014, 5.30pm

Seminar Room B3, Institute of Criminology,
Sidgwick Avenue, Cambridge, CB3 9DA

A drinks reception in the basement foyer will follow this seminar for attendees

Studies on the perception of minorities toward police legitimacy indicated that procedural justice play a major role in predicting police legitimacy, similar to the perceptions of the majority group. However, these studies were conducted in western countries where minority and the majority share the same social sphere (mixed cities), while our knowledge is very limited when alternative majority-minority relationship is considered. Furthermore, the study also explores the role of perceptions of discrimination and its effect on police legitimacy, especially among minorities.

Dr Hasisi serves as a Chair of the Institute of Criminology, The Hebrew University. His main research focuses on Policing Divided Societies and Police-Minority relations; and his research has been published in leading journals such as Law and Society Review, Criminal Justice and Behavior, American Law and Economic Review, Criminal Law and Criminology and the British Journal of Criminology. Dr Hasisi is also the executive editor of the Journal of Quantitative Criminology.

This seminar is free, and is open to all interested in attending, with no ticket required.
